get away from the women pursuers. All seemed to have had about an even start when they were first seen emerg-ing into the street. The women were talking shrilly and the men were apparently trying to modify them and to escape with dignity, when the pretty woman grabbed a cake of half-frozen snow from the sidewalk and threw it at the taller of the two men, at close range, striking him on the side of the face and spattering his shiny silk hat. He walked fast, but the woman overtook him and struck him over the head with her fists. The man was tall and about 55 years old. The woman was short and she had to reach pretty high to hit him. He made only a feeble resistance and tried to quiet the wo-

The two men were edging away from the women, when there came another fusillade of dirty snow, in which the two women joined. The men thought it time to hasten their retreat. From a rapid walk they broke into a run. They turned down Exchange alley toward Greenwich street and made good time. But the women were close upon them and hurled objurgations and chunks of snow, although their aim was poor and the shots fell short.

At the corner of Greenwich street the tall, elderly man, who seemed to be the particular target, paused and appealed to a policeman to arrest the women, but the blue coat said he couldn't interfere without a warrant.
